Research Associates

Greystone Research Associates is pleased to announce the publication of a new market assessment. Targeted Oncology Therapeutics: Breast Cancers is a comprehensive evaluation and analysis of the technology, products and participants providing the driving force behind this evolving segment of the healthcare sector. The study is designed to provide drug company decision makers, drug developers, and healthcare marketers with a detailed understanding of the economics, technologies, indications, and commercial opportunities for oncology drugs that target breast cancers. Provider organization business managers, healthcare administrators and investors will also benefit from this study.

Next-generation Therapeutics

The almost two thousand active oncology clinical trials paint a picture of an evolving therapeutic sector that has established players moving quickly to realize the expanded benefits of recent treatment protocols. A dozen targeted treatments, using novel pathways and signaling, have achieved results that represent a new era in oncology and antineoplastic therapeutics. These approaches have attracted a growing number of drug developers anxious to profit from therapies that can ease the physical, psychological and emotional burden of cancer. This report examines the fifty therapeutic drugs and the biomarkers they utilize.
